This is a flash game. Straight up. I don't care what anybody says, this shouldn't be sold on Steam for money. In fact, there are way better, more complex flash games out there, that you can get for free. This game attempts to be a Castlevania clone, but it lacks some of the most basic features. It only uses 3 buttons, if you don't count movement keys and weapon switching keys. One button is to shoot, one for melee and another one is a jump button. I don't think we can talk about any depth in gameplay with this. You can't even crouch, which was a feature in the very first Castlevania for NES. Enemy designs are atrocious, everything has this cheap anime look to it, and animations look unnatural. The menu and inventory are clunky and lack options. This game would only be tolerable on mobile devices or in a web browser. In fact, I wouldn't be surprised, if it's available on either of those and was made with that intention.
